The 28-mile Chula Vista Greenbelt system encircles the City and includes a variety of open space, parks, and trails that extend through the Otay Valley, Otay Reservoirs, Sweetwater Valley, National City and the Bayfront. Originally envisioned in the City of Chula Vista's 1989 General Plan, the Chula Vista Greenbelt is the City's emerald necklace.

Multi-Use Trail System

The Greenbelt's 28 miles of existing and planned multi-purpose trails (see reverse side) provide opportunities for improved health and fitness, and convenient access to the outdoors. The Greenbelt crosses through several jurisdictions, connects numerous trail networks, and provides access to a wide variety of recreational amenities.

Unique trail markers have been installed along the Greenbelt to assist users in navigating 21 miles of existing trails. Each trail marker has a jurisdictional logo and trail name, as well as the Centennial Greenbelt logo to memorialize the establishment of the trail system in Chula Vista's Centennial year. Look for the trail markers along each trail!

Trails within the remaining seven miles of the Greenbelt are still being planned and will be added in the future. They are indicated with a dashed line on the map (reverse side) and signs will be posted once they're open.

Trail Indicators

The trail map is divided into trail segments (A-F) and identifies points of interest, recreational amenities, parks, restrooms, parking and equestrian staging areas that are located within each segment. These features are indicated with the applicable symbols on the trails map, and a description of each of the amenities and points of interest are included here.
